INTRODUCTION

This is one of several near-identical petitions asking this Court to overrule its statutory decision in McGirt v. Oklahoma, 140 S. Ct. 2452 (2020). Its single question presented is identical to the second question presented in Oklahoma v. Mize, No. 21-274 (as well as the second question presented in Oklahoma v. Castro-Huerta, No. 21-429). This petition should be denied for the same reasons explained in the Brief in Opposition in Mize (“Mize Opp. __”).

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In August 2017, the Tenth Circuit applied Solem v. Bartlett, 465 U.S. 463 (1984), to hold that the Muscogee reservation endured. Murphy v. Royal, 875 F.3d 896, 966 (10th Cir. 2017). Despite this decision, in October 2017 Oklahoma charged Respondent Ryan Cortlan Johnson, a member of the Chickasaw Nation, for alleged crimes committed within the Muscogee reservation. Information (Okla. Dist. Ct., Okmulgee Cnty. Oct. 26, 2017).¹

Respondent moved to dismiss the charges against him for lack of jurisdiction pursuant to Murphy, arguing that he is Indian and the alleged conduct took place within the Muscogee reservation. Motion to Dismiss (Okla. Dist. Ct., Okmulgee Cnty. Feb. 13, 2019). The district court denied Respondent’s motion, and Oklahoma persisted in prosecuting Respondent, who was convicted in September 2019. Verdict (Okla. Dist.

Ct., Okmulgee Cnty. Sept. 16, 2019).

On appeal, Respondent again argued that Oklahoma lacked jurisdiction. Brief of Appellant at 11 (Okla. Ct. Crim. App. Sept. 11, 2020).² The Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals (“OCCA”) remanded to the district court for an evidentiary hearing on Respondent’s Indian status and whether the alleged crime took place on Indian land. Pet. App. 17a. The parties stipulated that Respondent was a registered citizen of the Chickasaw Nation, and that the charged crimes took place within the Muscogee reservation. Pet. App. 13a. Oklahoma did not argue, based on these stipulations, that the OCCA should deny relief. Supplemental Brief of Appellee after Remand at 4 (Okla. Ct. Crim. App. Jan. 4, 2021). On April 1, 2021, the OCCA duly vacated Respondent’s conviction. Pet. App. 3a-4a.

The OCCA stayed the mandate for 20 days. Pet. App. 4a. Within that period, the federal government filed a complaint against Respondent and promptly took him into custody. See Complaint (E.D. Okla. Apr. 19, 2021), ECF No. 1;³ Warrant of Arrest (E.D. Okla. Apr. 28, 2021), ECF No. 7. Respondent remains in federal detention, with trial set for February 2022. Detention Order Pending Trial (E.D. Okla. May 5, 2021), ECF No. 20; Order (E.D. Okla. July 7, 2021), ECF No. 35.

REASONS FOR DENYING THE PETITION

Oklahoma's request to overrule this Court's statutory decision in McGirt does not warrant review, for the reasons explained in the Mize Brief in Opposition. Mize Opp. 2-4, 19-38. Like many of this Court's statutory decisions, McGirt was divided. Like many such decisions, McGirt had real effects (though Oklahoma vastly overstates them). And like all of this Court's statutory decisions, the ball is now where the Constitution has placed it: With Congress.

Certiorari is not warranted to address Oklahoma's invitation for this Court to elbow Congress aside. It scarcely needs saying that this Court does not overrule statutory decisions based solely on changes in personnel. Stare decisis exists precisely to protect the "actual and perceived integrity of the judicial process" against such threats. Michigan v. Bay Mills Indian Cmty., 572 U.S. 782, 798 (2014) (quotation marks omitted). And stare decisis applies with "special force" in statutory cases, where "Congress remains free to alter what [this Court has] done." Halliburton Co. v. Erica P. John Fund, Inc., 573 U.S. 258, 274 (2014) (quotation marks omitted); see Mize Opp. 20-21.

Here, those principles are no mere abstractions. Oklahoma seeks certiorari in order to preempt active negotiations. In May 2021, its governor opposed H.R. 3091, which would have allowed the State to compact with two of the Five Tribes to obtain its pre-McGirt criminal jurisdiction. Mize Opp. 3, 12. In July 2021, the State opposed federal-law-enforcement funding because it did not desire “a permanent federal fix.”⁴ And weeks later, it became clear why: It preferred to swing for the fences in this Court. This Court’s place, however, is not in the middle of legislative negotiations. And Oklahoma’s siren song that “[o]nly the Court can remedy [its] problems,” Castro-Huerta Pet. 4, badly misunderstands this Court’s role.⁵ Mize Opp. 20-24; see Muscogee (Creek) Nation Mize Amicus Br. 25-28.

Rarely, moreover, will this Court receive so inappropriate a request justified by so little. Despite claiming “unprecedented disruption,” Castro-Huerta Pet. 10, Oklahoma points to few real effects—and none that could justify this Court substituting itself for Congress.

Oklahoma first told this Court that it must limit or overrule McGirt because “[t]housands” of prisoners were poised to successfully “challeng[e] decades’ worth of convictions.” Pet. 2, Oklahoma v. Bosse, No. 21-186. Subsequent events, however, removed that premise.

⁴ Reese Gorman, Cole Encourages State-Tribal Relations Over State Challenges to McGirt, Norman Transcript (July 23, 2021), <https://yhoo.it/3lYMjD8>.

After Oklahoma filed for certiorari in Bosse, the OCCA issued State ex rel. Matloff v. Wallace, 2021 OK CR 21, petition for cert. filed, No. 21-467 (U.S. Sept. 29, 2021). Matloff stated that the OCCA was “interpret[ing] ... state post-conviction statutes [to] hold that McGirt ... shall not apply retroactively to void a conviction that was final when McGirt was decided.” Id. ¶15. So Oklahoma shifted course. Seeking to salvage review, it filed a new petition, focusing on McGirt’s consequences for present and future criminal prosecutions and for civil jurisdiction. Castro-Huerta Pet. 18-22, 23-29. But try as Oklahoma might, the simple fact remains: McGirt today affects only the modest set of criminal cases still on direct review. Many of those cases (like this case) proceeded when Oklahoma knew its prosecutions might be invalid—and in such cases, retrial is easiest and least likely to face obstacles from time bars or stale evidence. Indeed, Oklahoma’s many petitions fail to mention the federal and tribal prosecutions that are comprehensively occurring in those cases, or that the federal government has already obtained convictions in several such cases. Mize Opp. 24-27; see Muscogee (Creek) Nation Mize Amicus Br. 8-11.

Going forward, the proper allocation of jurisdiction among the federal government, the State, and Tribes is a question for Congress, which can decide whether to modify jurisdictional lines. Meanwhile, Oklahoma’s claims of a “criminal-justice crisis” today, Castro-Huerta Pet. 4, are largely unburdened by evidence and badly misstate the facts. In reality, the federal government and Five Tribes are working to fulfill the responsibilities McGirt gives them and seeking the resources they need to do so (often over Oklahoma’s opposition). Mize Opp. 27-32; see Muscogee (Creek) Nation Mize Amicus Br. 12-18.

Oklahoma’s claims about civil consequences are even more reality-free. In fact, its position, undisclosed to the Court in its petitions, is that McGirt applies only to criminal jurisdiction and has no civil effects. In all events, moreover, those effects will be vastly less than Oklahoma suggests. And the place to address such concerns is in civil cases—which will make concrete McGirt’s (limited) actual consequences. Oklahoma’s overwrought claims have no place in this criminal case. Mize Opp. 32-37; see Muscogee (Creek) Nation Mize Amicus Br. 19-24.

Indeed, Oklahoma’s petitions are a source of, not a solution to, uncertainty. Overruling McGirt would invalidate thousands of federal and tribal prosecutions and squander tens of millions of dollars spent in reliance on McGirt. Meanwhile, granting review would freeze negotiations indefinitely. Oklahoma apparently is happy to impose those costs. But that only underscores why its arguments should be directed to Congress, which the Constitution charges with making such decisions. Mize Opp. 31-32; see Muscogee (Creek) Nation Mize Amicus Br. 25-28.

The Court should also deny review because Oklahoma did not preserve its request to overrule McGirt. In cases from state courts, this Court reviews only questions “pressed or passed on below.” Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 219-20, 222 (1983). And that remains true even when litigants argue that a “well-settled federal” rule “should be modified.” Id. at 222. “[C]hief among” the considerations supporting that practice “is [the Court’s] own need for a properly developed record.” Bankers Life & Cas. Co. v. Crenshaw, 486 U.S. 71, 79 (1988). This case illustrates why that is the rule. Oklahoma seeks McGirt’s overruling based on claims of “disruption.” Castro-Huerta Pet. 3-4. But because Oklahoma did not raise its argument below, the record contains no evidence to support these claims.⁶ Instead, Oklahoma fills its petition with citation-free assertions from counsel. That is no way to undertake the grave task of weighing whether to abandon stare decisis. If Oklahoma wants this Court to entertain that request, it should develop a record in the lower courts. Even better, it should take its claims to Congress, which has the institutional capacity to gather evidence and the institutional responsibility to make legislative judgments based on that evidence.

CONCLUSION

The petition should be denied.

⁶ To Respondent’s knowledge, the same is true of all Oklahoma’s pending petitions.
